ClearFocus: Productivity Timer

Frustrated me that it won't show full time that you have studied in the stats only the completed session.. I'm a full time student with a 9 month old son, it's not always possible to complete full sessions.. would be nice to see all active sessions recorded not just completed ones

FINALLY. I must have tried like 14 pomodoro apps. First that had the simple features I was looking for (1) vibration (2) skip (3) can PICK break or pomodoro (4) keep screen off or on. WINNER. Still a winner in my book and worth 5 stars but if there was a dark theme, that would be great.

Great app that does exactly what it's supposed to do, without extra fluff and other bullshit that the other apps have. Only minor annoyance is those two thin white circles inside the gray one while the timer is stopped, but it can be easily overlooked because the timer is stopped for a very short time. Color customization would be a nice addition.

More options than other simple pomodoros Big plus is the lack of intrusive permissions. It's got what a regular, stripped down pomodoro timer should have, including options to change the sound and fiddle with a few other options. For me, I've found other apps that fit my needs better, as I prefer more options. That being said, I would still recommend this app.

Awesome No permissions or ads made this an instant install. Was not disappointed by anything. A visible count of the number of pomos completed since launching the app would make this 100% perfect for my needs. (If you implement this feature please link to a way to donate.)
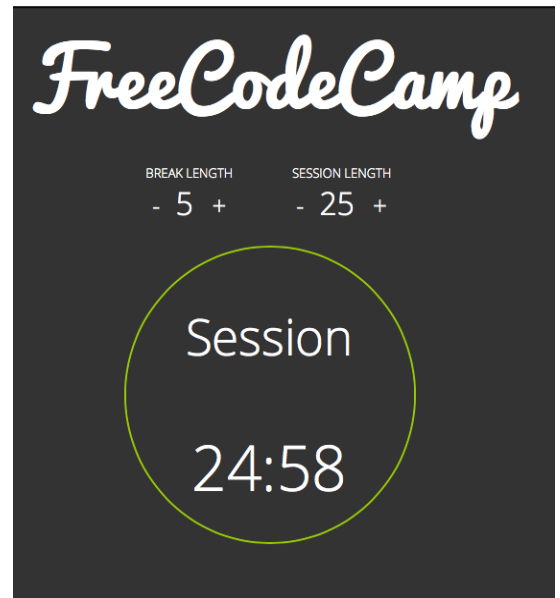

Basic market research suggests:

1) Not always possible to complete sessions

2) Thin circles are not easy to see

3) Can Pick break or promodo

4) Color customization is useful; dark mode

Promodo Web App

Reverse engineer the example project's functionality, and also feel free to personalize it.

User Story: As a user, I can

- Start a 25 minute pomodoro, and the timer will go off once 25 minutes has elapsed.
- Reset the clock for my next pomodoro.
- Customize the length of each pomodoro.

- Notepaper for initial concepts, then more detailed, then do final 'mockup' in inkscape (+GIMP) , using gridlines. Also look at using Brackets 'DesignView' initially. Use the 'research' from users comments in app store and also test with 'mum' as baseline user.
  Make sure clear 'target' 'customer' – and can convert CSS/HTML/JS for future Cordova app !

- Proper grid structure, make own (see DevTips flexbox header) or use say 'skeleton' or pure css frameworks (oh and understand how they work). Also use Mostly fluid, Column drop, Layout shifter, Tiny tweaks, Off canvas Responsive web design patterns

- DevTIps Starter kit + HTML5 boiler plate combination to create own code structure. Check out the differect 'start up kits' and identify whats best for now. Don't bite off too much!

- Use of <articles> and <sections> semantics <buttons> , <header>. Own descriptions etc..

- SASS not straight CSS

Hi, Thank you for your great review! I just added a feature for statistic. For now it is really minimalist but will have more feature soon. No donate link for now but thank you for the intention!

Hi, Thank you for your feedback. I would like to know what kind of color are you searching for? Would a dark theme help you? Thank you

Please add Chromecast support. I often do my homework at home and therefore a pomodoro app is crucial for me. But it would be nice with support for chromecast so I can follow the progress on my television.

Alexis Theriault November 3, 2015
Hi, Thank you for your comment! That is a great idea! So far I do not own a chromecast. But I am interested in creating this feature. So I will either buy one or if you are fine with it, I will send you a beta version of the application so that you can try it with your Chromecast. Let me know if you would like a beta? Thank you!
